Something you'll learn when putting your backyard driving range together is that there is no 'plan' that is set in stone. With an indoor golf simulator some things are mandatory such as a video processing system, a projector, a swing mat, etc. With the backyard version your main goal is to get repetitions in, no matter how you go about doing so. Take for example a swing mat. If you have ...

Most driving range facilities also offer putting greens and short-game areas for people wanting to work on chipping and putting. Treat these areas as you would a green on the golf course. In doing so, you ensure the next person to use the greens will have the same experience as yourself. Do not chip on to these greens from the driving range. Doing so presents a serious safety hazard. When ...

Why You Are Better On the Driving Range vs the Golf Course

A good practice method for perfecting your gold swing is to stand with your feet closer together and try to hit the ball accurately. This forces you to work on your balance and tempo, which is useful when you go back to your normal stance. Pay attention to your golf grip. If the golf ball is veering to the right every time, your grip may be too tight. If it is veering to the left, your grip ...
