Citation. Guilford, J. P. (1942). Fundamental statistics in psychology and education. New York, NY, US: McGraw-Hill. Abstract. The author presents this book as a supplement to his Psychometric methods (see 10: 6010). This new text presupposes no previous knowledge of statistics and does not include the emphasis on measurement nor psychophysics which was contained in the previous one.

Fundamental statistics in psychology and education, 3rd ed. In this third edition (see 24: 4974) the author retains the earlier editions' "preponderance of attention to descriptive statistics" while expanding the treatment of aspects of sampling statistics. New material is included in the area of hypothesis testing and statistical influence.
