The key of C minor was, like most other minor keys, associated with the literary Sturm und Drang movement during the Classical period. But ever since Ludwig van Beethoven's famous Symphony No. 5, Op. 67, of 1808, C minor imparts a symphony in the key a character of heroic struggle. Early classical symphonies in the key typically ended in C minor but with a picardy third for the very final chord.

Symphony No. 7 by Gustav Mahler was written in 1904–05, with repeated revisions to the scoring. It is sometimes referred to by the title Song of the Night (German: Lied der Nacht), which Mahler never knew (and certainly would be unlikely to have sanctioned). Although the symphony is often described as being in the key of E minor, its tonal scheme is more complicated.

What is A Symphony? A symphony is a large-scale orchestral composition. In many ways, the best way to understand it is to see it as a composer's “big moment”. Symphonies are “reserved by composers for their most weighty and profound orchestral thoughts” (The Oxford Dictionary of Music; Kennedy, M. 1986).. As a result, symphonies tend to be long (they can often be 40 minutes in length).
