This was about a girl with a royal bloodline who finds a beautiful carpet that is made either by magic, or technology. Christopher Pike combines modern and an ancient form storytelling that creates beautiful imagery in the readers mind from start to finish. I read up on magic carpets on Wikipedia following links to little known websites about them and am so glad the author revitalized an old and important relic of universal imagination. After reading this book I'm inspired.

A riveting fantasy from the imagination of New York Times best-selling author Christopher Pike. On vacation in Istanbul, Sara unearths a flying carpet that cleverly drags her to the mysterious Island of the Djinn or genies. By her side is Amesh, a cute guy she has a crush on but doesn't yet trust. When Amesh learns the secret of invoking djinn, he loses control. He swears he'll call upon only one djinn and make one wish. The plan sounds safe enough. But neither Sara nor Amesh is any match ...

In Pike's newest work, The Secret of Ka, we see an imaginative story with almost fairy tale-like qualities that takes us to the land of the Djinn and incorporates elements of ancient fables. Building on the tales of magic carpets and genies, Pike has created a modern day fairy tale unlike any other currently available.

Although Pike suggested at the time that he might like to write a sequel, he's been writing other things since then. Whether or not a book gets a sequel rather depends on how well it sells. (For example, the publishers pulled the plug on the "Nemi" series" because it did not do well enough) Although I can't find the sales figures for "The Secret of Ka", it did get some very mixed reviews.

His adult novel Falling is one of my favorite books and one I lend the most. But back to the Secret of Ka- the heroine Sara, is only 15, and yet she's got the spunk and ability of Pike's best main characters. Not sure how I felt about Amesh, I'd like to see his character fleshed out a bit more, as well as Mira's.
